ARRIVALS LIGHT AGAIN TODAY

FIVE SMALL TRAWLERS HAVE LANDED FARES HERE SINCE YESTERDAY.

Today's receipts of fresh fish are very light, for, since yesterday, there has been but five small trawlers landing groundfish at local dealers. All of the fleet is out and the harbor, aside from tied up craft, is practically deserted today. Of the fleet of gill netters fishing yesterday, only six out of eight had fish enough to report and they averaged only a little better than 1600 pounds each, their total lift being 10,000 pounds.

COAST GUARD PICKS

UP FIORE AND MARINO

Disabled with engine trouble, the 22-ton dragger Fiore and Marino of Boston, was towed to the Boston fish pier early yesterday by the Coast Guard patrol boat C.G. 152, which picked her up off Minot's light. The fisherman was returning to port from the shore grounds when she became crippled. A distress signal quickly brought the rescue craft to her side.

Shifting Over.

Capt Archie McLeod of sch. Catharine is taking off her haddock gear and getting ready for halibuting. He expects to start the first of next week.

The local gill netter Elizabeth and James, Capt. James Parsons, has set her gear off of the Maine coast, and for the next few weeks, will market her catch at Portland, Me.

With fishing curtailed and catch therefore reduced, and with prices low, the landed value of the 1932 fares fell below the 1931 figures and amounted in all to approximately $11,026,000 as compared with about

$14,519,000. Revision of the 1932 figures by the Dominion Department of Fisheries, which has collected and compiled the unrevised totals now given, will make some change both as to catch and value but the changes are not likely to be important.

There are five sea fisheries provinces in the Dominion—British Columbia, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick,

Quebec and Prince Edward Island—and in all of them except Prince Edward Island catch and landed value alike decreased in 1932.

Nova Scotia's catch was totalled 1,947,888 hundred-weight with a landed value of $3,833,536.
